Hongkong, 1st April, 1886. [193]

The National Dress Society very wisely draws attention to the inconvenience of the ladies' riding habit so strained, untidy and tiring position, and causes them to sit in it well as the body of the horse, which is not the way of the rider on one side. The comfort is well lost if both horse and rider would be vastly increased if the weight of the body were equally balanced on both sides of the horn, the rider having a dress in which she could assume this position. In such a dress and position not only more comfort, but more safety would be obtained by greater security of seat and absence of encumbering and entangling drapery.

A short time ago Ed. Burford, the champion seal hunter of New Brighton, S. I., thought he had discovered the whereabouts of a real man, whom he had longed about Robin's roof. He was with him when he was discovered to be a woman, and a "John Morgan" and author of his most favorite opera. Mr. Burford continued in this opinion until George Howard of Tompkinsville caught a big dogfish, which on its travels had swallowed a small musical box of the "Johnny Morgan" persuasion. Since then Mr. Burford has given up his moonlight trips to Robin's roof and says "he passes the mermaid racket—no singing syringes for him."

EXTRACT.

RICHARD THE THIRD AT BOSWORTH. — "None says that 'the intrepid tyrant, sensible now of his desperate situation after Stanley's open defection, cast his eyes around the field, and, despising his rival, with fury from me. 'What about the Russian crisis? I have no news of late, but I believe there will be no war.' It is certain there will be none." "I had not heard that." "And if there were war who would conquer?" "Please God, the English." "I hope they may."

KOREAN CUSTOMS.

M. E. H. Parker, H.E.M.'s Consul at Cheonju, writes in the Japan Gazette as follows:—The Court dress of the King of Korea includes a crown and a sceptre; various silks, and flesh-coloured stockings. He wears a purple gauze robe. His courtiers wear a gold cap, similar to that worn by emperors in the Tang dynasty, and hold a tablet to their breasts; they are put embroidered upon other garments and carry jingling ornaments at the girdles. Civilians, in great functions, range themselves on the east side, and military officials on the west. When the King dies an announcement showing the exact time of the event is sent to all the provinces. Lamentations being as soon as the news arrives, and on the 6th day afterwards mourning is put on for 27 days.

The flags of the royal family are limited to inclusi.; that of persons with the same surname as the king to six inches; that of persons with a different surname to six inches; that of persons of the same family-name as the Queen to eight inches; and that of persons related to her but bearing different surnames to five inches. Persons with the same surname as the wife of the heir are limited to six inches, and persons with different surnames to three." The king's sons-in-law are limited to five inches.

In receiving and spending guests, the forms are to descend the steps and bend the back outside the outer gate, and both outside and inside the middle gate. Those of equal rank pause deferentially before sitting.

The king's grandson is enabled at 10; others receive titles at 15. When three sons are born at a venter, the king presents to the happy parent. Ladies of 90 receive rank, but a husband can never receive posthumous rank on account of his wife's qualities. Anyone who reaches the age of 10 receives a gratuity, and his sons and grandsons are allowed to address the king.

Annual reports are sent about, and rewards are granted to dutiful sons, virtuous women, happy families, and so on, just as in China.

Even worthy beggars receive annual rewards of rice and cloths under these heads.

Gentlemen's daughters who, on account of poverty, approach the age of 30 without finding a husband, receive assistance from the king on representation made by the head of the tribe. Beggars without relatives, and aged persons without support, receive occasional clothes and other relief.

Officials who cause the death of persons by the use of torture, receive 100 blows, and are dismissed from the public service.

Following the laws of the Ming Dynasty, persons sentenced to flogging with the heavier or lighter bamboo, as also to exile or banishment, may ransom their punishment either with money or cotton cloth. There are five degrees of punishment with the lighter bamboo. Ten blows or seventy cash.

Twenty, twenty, and 100 blows, respectively, are given with the heavier bamboo; for 60, 80, 90, and 100 blows, respectively.
